President's Address

RAHS President Iain Stuart announced he will step down after three years in the role, in line with the RAHS Constitution. He thanked Councillors and employees for their support and hard work during his term.

Dr Stuart reflected on the challenges of rescoping the History House Project, with a current focus on roof repairs, drainage upgrades, and addressing subsidence—vital steps to secure the building's long-term future. He also acknowledged key initiatives, including the rollout of the online catalogue and expansion of hybrid events to improve access and engagement.

He concluded by inviting members to the upcoming RAHS/National Archaeology Week event, which he will host. The session will explore the Irrawang site—an important early colonial industrial site and one of the first historical archaeological projects undertaken in Australia, with insights from leading archaeologists. Affiliated Insurance Reminder and Guidance on Providing Historical Advice

A reminder to all Affiliated Societies that the insurance renewal process is now underway. Completed forms and payments are due by Tuesday, 29 April 2025.

If your society has not received a renewal form by email, please contact us at admin@rahs.org.au

We have also received several enquiries regarding the risks associated with providing historical information to developers and other third parties. This trend is becoming more common following recent changes to NSW planning legislation—particularly the introduction of the Low and Mid-Rise Housing Policy in March 2025. This policy allows for the construction of terraces, townhouses, and low-rise apartments in areas previously zoned for detached homes, leading to increased development activity across many local areas.

You can read more about the policy here: NSW Planning - Low and Mid-Rise Housing Policy

In light of these changes, we offer the following guidance:

- If historical information is provided free of charge: Always include a disclaimer stating that the material is provided for general historical information purposes only and does not constitute legal or professional advice.
- If historical information is provided for a fee: Affiliated Societies should also include a disclaimer. In addition, they should assess whether Professional Indemnity Insurance is necessary. Professional historians who charge for historical research often hold this type of insurance, which provides an added layer of protection against the risks of providing information relied upon by third parties—such as building developers—that influences decisions or outcomes.

If you have further questions about insurance and whether your society may need professional indemnity coverage, please contact us. We can refer you to our contacts at Marsh, who coordinate the RAHS public liability and group personal accident insurance schemes. They can provide tailored guidance based on your organisation's specific activities and needs, as this type of cover is assessed on a case-by-case basis.

JRAHS Podcast: Martial Law in Australia

Ben Hingley - PhD Student, University of New England

Martial law was declared seven times in pre-Federation Australia, playing a part in some significant historical events. Yet very little has been written on the topic, and no comparative study has so far been made. This paper gathers, for the first time, brief accounts of all of the martial law events in the early colonies into one document and draws some initial comparisons. It will be seen that martial law was an adaptable doctrine. In the years between 1790 and 1853, it was used to fend off starvation, quash two rebellions, overthrow a government, and wage two wars against First Nations peoples.

RAHS Day Lecture Charles Darwin in Australia

Speaker: Frank Nicholas.

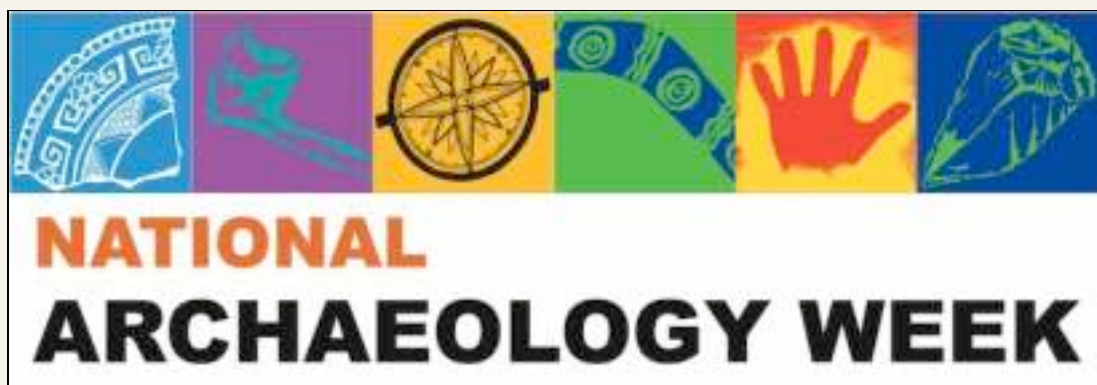

When: Wednesday, 7 May 2025 at 1 pm.

Where: History House, 133 Macquarie St, Sydney.

Cost: Free.

Early in 1836, Charles Darwin spent two months in Australia as part of his voyage around the world on HMS Beagle. This lecture will be based on Darwin's diary entries, illustrated with contemporary sketches and paintings by former fellow Beagle shipmates Conrad Martens and Augustus Earle. The complete story is told in the book Charles Darwin in Australia, co-authored by Frank and by his wife Jan, who, having worked in the pictures section of the State Library of NSW, was familiar with the relevant Martens and Earle illustrations.

RAHS-NAW Lecture Irrawang: The History and the Archaeology

When: Wednesday, 21 May 2025 at 6 pm to 7 pm.

Where: Hybrid: History House AND Online via Zoom.

In-Person Cost: RAHS Members $20 | Non-Members $25.

Online Cost: RAHS Members $10 | Non-Members $15.

Just north of Raymond Terrace near the Williams River lies Irrawang, a site important for its early colonial industry and for being one of the earliest historical archaeological projects in Australia. James King was a colonial entrepreneur with interests in a number of ventures. King experimented with glass manufacture before he took a grant in the Hunter Valley to develop a winery. He then set up a pottery on his land to manufacture utilitarian wares. The pottery was moderately successful until the gold rush resulted in his labour decamping and the enterprise closed down.

In the 1970s, Judy Brimingham and the students from the Archaeological Society at the University of Sydney began to excavate the Irrawang site. The work at Irrawang also provided a key stimulus to the development of historical archaeology in Australia. Recently, members from the Industrial Heritage Committee of the National Trust have revived interest in Irrawang, largely because it has not been listed on the State Heritage Register. Although many know of the site, little is known about what happened there.

This session hosted by Dr Iain Stuart and with contributions from Felicity Barry, Stephanie Moore, Isabella Trope and James Cole, aims to present what is known about the site's history and archaeology. Being a hybrid presentation, we hope to also have contributions from key individuals who worked on the site.

Gresford to Carrabolla – People and Places

The Paterson Historical Society's new book, Gresford to Carrabolla – People and Places by Dr Brian Walsh, was recently launched by the Mayor of Dungog, Digby Rayward, at Gresford Bowling Club. It was published with support from Create NSW's Cultural Grants Program.

The book reveals how European society emerged along the Paterson River from the 1820s, albeit at the expense of Aboriginal people. It provides information on the landowners, convicts, immigrants and colonial-born who worked on the estates or leased parts of them as tenant farmers. It features the many 'selectors' who took up small blocks in the upper Paterson's remote bushland, hills and mountains. The book also highlights the schools, churches and post offices that became a vital part of the social fabric of the upper Paterson.

The 168-page book includes a comprehensive index and is illustrated with many photos, maps and diagrams. It is available at Paterson Court House Museum on Sundays, Macdonalds Book Store in Maitland and several outlets in Paterson. It can also be purchased online from patersonhistory.square.site.

This project is supported by the Create NSW Cultural Grants Program, a devolved funding program administered by the RAHS on behalf of the NSW Government.

Military History Society of NSW

Educating Professional Soldiers in Military History

Military history as a discipline has always been seen and classified as part of military education. Not surprisingly there is a common conception – albeit a wrong one – that military academies and staff colleges are the bastions of military history. Very few people notice that most of military historians are actually working in civilian universities and military history programs in universities have generally better academic ratings. Although military leaders seem to place great emphasis on drawing lessons from military history, it appears that military history programs in higher military educational institutes are simply not flourishing and actually losing ground. Then the obvious question is what is going on with professional military education? Is military history, as an academic discipline, an essential part of the current professional military education? If not, why is that? And finally, what is the way ahead?

This presentation is an effort to analyse these questions within the history of professional military education. The presentation will not spend time justifying the need for the study of military history.

When: Saturday, 3 May at 10.30 am.

Where: The Auditorium, Anzac Memorial Hyde Park, Sydney.

Admission: Free, but a donation is appreciated.

Sydney Art Deco

Dr Peter Sheridan AM will discuss aspects of his critically acclaimed 2019 book Sydney Art Deco, which explores the impact of the Art Deco style on Sydney's landscape and life during the 1930s and 1940s with glimpses of Australian artwork, fashion, furniture, appliances and accessories from the period. Sydney has a rich trove of Art Deco architecture in the central business district and inner suburbs. Art Deco incorporated new technology, mass production and the machine age, promising a new future. Sydney's housing changed with the advent of Art Deco-style apartment blocks in the late 1920s. The best Australian examples of these are in the Potts Point/Elizabeth Bay area, but many are now under threat from inappropriate development. Some copies of Peter's books will be on sale. Parramatta and District Historical Society announces the Speaker for the

May 2025 Monthly Meeting

The Speaker on this occasion will be

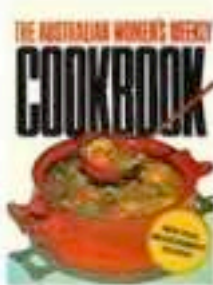

Lauren Samuelsson

Her subject

“A Matter of Taste – The Australian Women’s Weekly and Its influence on Australian Food Culture”

Dr Lauren Samuelsson holds a PhD in history from the University of Wollongong, Australia, where she is an Associate Lecturer. Lauren’s research interests include cultural history, the history of food and drink, the history of popular culture and gender history. Her first book, A Matter of Taste was published in 2024. She is a regular guest on Australian radio, where she shares her love of food history with people nationwide.

The Australian Women’s Weekly (the Weekly) is Australia’s longest running and most widely read women’s magazine. During the 1950s and 1960s, it had the largest per capita circulation of any women’s magazine in the world. Since its very first issue, food has held an integral place in the Weekly magazine as well as in their separate range of cookbooks. Despite its role as premier women’s magazine in Australia, historians have yet to explore the impact that this prominent text has played in shaping the eating habits of ‘everyday Australians’; the food consumed around Australian dinner tables; the tastes of the nation. This presentation will consider some of the myriad ways that the Weekly contributed to the development of domestic food culture in Australia.

TIME and DATE: 7.30 pm Monday 19 May 2025

Transforming the Macquarie Street Building

We're excited to announce that the contemporary transformation of the Library's Macquarie Street building is moving forward, with work set to begin in May 2025.

Visitor numbers have soared this past year, with more readers and visitors than ever before enjoying our essential services, magnificent collections, and rich and varied experiences. The planned major refurbishment of the Macquarie Street building will ensure we continue to meet your needs — now and into the future.

Here's what to expect:

- an improved entrance providing a world-class welcome
- a refurbished Bashir Reading Room with more seating and study areas
- a modern, expanded cafe and bookshop
- more open and accessible spaces to enjoy.

To make this possible, the Macquarie Street building — including the Bashir Reading Room, Library bookshop and cafe — will temporarily close from 5 pm, Monday 12 May until the completion of the refurbishment later this year. The entrance to the Library will be through the Library's Mitchell building.

During this time, a temporary bookshop and cafe will be available in the Dixon Room, on the ground floor of the Mitchell Building, so you will still be able to take advantage of your Friends discount.

All services usually offered in the Bashir Reading Room (except study rooms and the Children's Library) will be accessible in the Mitchell building's Gallery Room, so the corridor leading to the Friends Room will be busier than usual.

We appreciate your patience while we work towards creating a space befitting a world-leading library at the heart of culture, community and knowledge in NSW.

We look forward to sharing our progress with you. For more information, news and updates, visit sl.nsw.gov.au/buildingworks or email your enquiry to news@sl.nsw.gov.au

Community Heritage Grants 2025 Round – Now Open

What are the Community Heritage Grants?

The Community Heritage Grants (CHG) program supports community-based organisations to identify and care for Australian, moveable cultural heritage collections which are publicly accessible, locally held and nationally significant.

How we can help

The CHG supports small, local groups with limited funding and staffing resources, who would benefit from access to professional cultural heritage expertise. Grants of up to $20,000 are available to help organisations undertake a three-stage journey to assess their collection, identify collection care recommendations and implement practical improvements.

Non-profit, incorporated organisations and some government agencies – including historical societies, archives, regional museums, public libraries, community groups, multicultural and First Nations organisations – are encouraged to apply. For more details visit the CHG website.

Activities we support

In the first two stages, organisations work with experienced heritage practitioners to produce reports that:

- Explain the meanings and value of their collections (a significance assessment)
- Outline the condition of their collections and provide a conservation and

Outline the condition of their collections and provide a conservation and collection management plan (a preservation needs assessment).

In the third stage, funding is available to:

- Undertake conservation and collection management activities, as recommended in the preservation needs assessment. This may include conservation, purchase of collection housing and storage materials, environmental control and monitoring equipment or digitisation.

CHG also offers grants for collection management training projects or cataloguing and collection management system software.

Applications and guidelines

Applicants should read the 2025 CHG Round Guidelines before applying. The Guidelines and application forms are available on the CHG website.
